Partnership to honor Kentucky veterans

Kentucky veterans of all eras will be recognized through a partnership among the Behringer-Crawford Museum, the Kentucky Veterans Hall of Fame and Gateway Community and Technical College.

The museum and Gateway announced partnership and said they are working with the the Kentucky Veterans Hall of Fame to create a database kiosk of inductees, their service history and their contributions to their communities, according to the museum.

The Hall of Fame, founded in 2012 recognizes Kentucky veterans who have served honorably and who have gone on to make exemplary contributions in their communities. The first class of 27 veterans was inducted in March.

With the local effort, BCM will display the kiosk on occasion along with an exhibit highlighting Northern Kentucky inductees to the Kentucky Veterans Hall of Fame. In addition, BCM and Gateway will help with creating and promoting similar kiosks at regional museums and technical and community colleges through out the state.
